In an effort to uncover student experience with Notre Dame's Catholic Character, a student government committee has recently distributed student surveys that will play an integral role in its final report to the University's Board of Trustees.
"[The surveys] are designed to gather impressions of student Catholic experience with Catholic Character," said Catherine Miller, committee chairwoman. "We're not looking for one big answer, just for different student experiences with it."
he report, entitled "Renewing the Mission: A Student Perspective of Notre Dame's Catholic Character," is the result of a one-year study that will be presented to the Board at their May 5th meeting.
It is the first time that a student government committee has examined this subject.
Within its focus on the responsibility of the Notre Dame community to respond to the Catholic mission of the University, the report will also include a separate section on the issues facing non-Catholics at the University.
In addition to gathering the student input, the 15 member committee has spoken to faculty members and administrators during the past year.

At the beginning of every semester, Notre Dame students take part in a ritual as common to this campus as tail-gating and DARTing.
Undergraduates from every nook and cranny of the University trek to the bookstore, stand in long lines, get out their pen and checkbook, and vent their rage over the receipts.
Akin to this phenomenon is the disbelief professed at the rumored sums said to be changing hands on football Saturdays at the
What about the rumors, then commonly heard in dorms and the dining halls?
Does the bookstore over charge?
Is it privately owned?
Where does all the money go? Larry Ratliff, the director of the bookstore, and Jim Lyphout, Associate Vice-president of Business Affairs for the University, recently talked to The Observer about these questions and other concerns sur-

Ratliff was surprised at some of the rumors circulating around campus.
"The bookstore is owned and operated by the University of Notre Dame," Ratliff said. "It falls under the Vice-President of Business Affairs' office, same as food services, same as [St. Michael's] laundry, [and] same as the Morris Inn.
"It's run like any other University department," said Lyphout. "Any revenue exceeding expenses goes to the Uniing expenses goes to the University's general revenue. It's not a stand-alone entity. All the employees are University employees."
Like every other University department, the bookstore describes its function and purpose in an official mission statement. According to the statement, The Hammes Notre Dame Bookstore is operated on sound business principles in the anticipation that its income will cover both its operating expenses and its attributable capital development costs, as well as contribute to the general budget requirements of the University.'
Lyphout shed light on the statement's terminology. He said attributable capital development costs are funds used to cover major equipment, such as shelving and computers Currently the bookstore is upgrading its data processing capacities.

While the bookstore is expected to contribute to the University, it does not operate under a strict budgetary plan, said Lyphout. No one suffers repercussions if the budget goes wry
All income from the bookstore contributes to the University's unrestricted funds. "That, in effect, limits the cost of tuition," Lyphout said.
"We don't have a policy or mandate as to what the book store contributes to the general budget," said Lyphout. "Some years are better than others We'll fluctuate from year to year. We have enough flexibilty in our budget to allow for fluctuations."
The bookstore operates like any for-profit company or business, said Ratliff. And, he added, netting a profit is not always guaranteed.

There's no guarantee that any corporation is going to make a profit," he said. "There's no guarantee that they're Neither Lyphout or Ratliff were obliged to disclose how much the bookstore takes in annually or on football Saturdays. Though the bookstore is run as a profit-making business, the University is a tax-exempt, not-for-profit institution and thus not compelled to make public its finances. Since the bookstore falls under the auspices of the University, it is not compelled by law to report its earnings. The University's accounting office processes all of the bookstore's bills.
"We treat that as confidential information," Lyphout said When asked whether the with holding of the bookstore's finances is necessary to the Uni versity's best interests, Lyphout ersity" "We think, Lyphout With all the think so.
With all the student griping on camp, one might assum be common. Butliff said that be common. Ratiff said tha the bookstore does receiv complaints, but did not elabo rate on their nature or number. In fact, Ratliff sees complaints as positive.
"I'd say we're very blessed from the stand-point that we have a consumer who knows Ratliff they re doing, said Ratir. Not every retailer has that benefit. I would probably say that number of complaints plements."
Ratliff said all complaints are promptly answered and most pre worked out "Usually the are worked out. "Usually the one who calls is explained to," he said. "We try to help them understand why a certain procedural policy is in practice. Most times there is a complaint, there is a misunderstanding."

Both Ratliff and Lyphout said the number one problem facing the bookstore right now is space.
"My predecessor asked for more space, and I asked for more space," said Ratliff. "Talk to most campus bookstores and they'll say the same thing."
"Retail is very highly con-sumer-responsive," he added. "If you're really doing your job. you always need more space
The area which needs most space is books. A recent report by The Colloquy for the Year 2000 stated, "a working committee submitted a ...report on an academic bookstore which is presently being carried

However, I also believe that it is simply unacceptable for the administration to convert a residence hall that maintains a high level of dorm spirit and exemplifies the Notre Dame Family
The selection of Cavanaugh as the dorm to be converted was based primarily on the number of beds. It is ironic that the factors not considered in the decision were ones that most students, like myself, believe to be the most impor tant elements of a dorm.
The factors not considered were the intangibles: dorm loyalty, dorm spirit, and contributions to the university. These intangibles, overlooked by O'Hara and the Board of Trustees are the things I will miss most about are the

At Notre Dame, initiation into the four-year residence hall is the first and most important step toward immersion into the greater Notre Dame Family. Academic, social, spiritual, and athletic communities are fostered in the residence halls. The dorm, for most Notre Dame undergraduates, is more than a bed, it is a home.
In the 1960s Notre Dame introduced its first stay" halls, or four-year residence halls. The primary objective of this switch was to establish greater dorm spirit in each hall. Cavanaugh Hall, along with several other residence halls, has succeeded by creating a true sense of this intangible dorm spirit. Even though hall spirit is difficult to measure, it can be seen through significant participation at hall dances, masses, and special events. If there is a need for women's residences and a men's hall displays apathy and a lack of spirit; then, it should be seriously considered for conversion.

Cavanaugh will never be the same. The weight room will be replaced by a laundry room, our keys will not fit the DETEX machine, and the tradition of "2 AM section dances" will come to an end. We have unjustly been stripped of our livelihoods. The only things the university will never be able to take away from us are our memories of what was once our home.

I know we have all heard the rhetoric and debate, but just remember the men of Cavanaugh only want what's their due. I hope the ladies of Cavanaugh next year can carry on our tradition of excellence.

NEW YORK

Abstract

Former President Nixon took a turn for the worse and was returned to intensive care Tuesday, a day after a stroke left him paralyzed on most of his right side and unable to speak, his doctor said. Nixon was suffering from swelling of the brain as a result of the stroke, said Dr. Fred Plum, chief of neurology at New York Hospital. For the  first time since the former president Monday night, his attack was described as a "major" stroke. "The next one to three days is a critical period. One has to say his prognosis is guarded," Plum said. Earlier in the day Nixon, 81, had been moved into a private room. Doctors said earlier in the day that Nixon was paralyzed on the right side except for his right foot. Strokes - damage to part of the brain caused by insufficient blood supply - are the nation's third leading cause of death. They strike about 500,000 people annually, killing one-third. Nixon's daughters, Tricia Cox and Julie killing one-third. Nixon's daughters, Tricia Cox and Julie Eisenhower, went to his bedside Monday night, and again Eisenhower, went to his bedside Monday night, and again Tuesday. Dozens of calls of concern poured in from political figures, long-time friends, and ordinary people, some of whom had survived strokes and wanted to pass along encouragement, another aide, Elizabeth Johnston, said.

The award was significantly below the $$ 15$ million sought by King's lawyers but well above the $$ 800,000$ the city said was a fair sum. Compensatory damages are intended to pay for King's losses, including income and medical expenses. Only the city was liable for compensatory damages. A second phase of the trial, to begin immediately, will determine punitive damages. There will be 14 defendants in the second phase, including the officers who beat King as well as officers who stood by at the scene. Much of the three-week compensatory damage trial was a battle of medical experts who disagreed on questions of permanent disability and brain damage. ## SMC parietal policy up for review

By MYRNA MALONEY News Writer

The policy of leaving identification at the front desk of each residence hall upon entering with a male guest may be reinstated next fall, according to discussion at Monday night's Residence Hall Association (RHA) meeting.
The Senior Officers of Saint Mary's College, by request from RHA, agreed last spring to withdraw the original visitation policy for the trial basis of the 1993-94 school year under the condition that the issue would be re-evaluated this spring, acdence Hall Director in Holy Cross Hall.
"For one year, it was agreed that leaving ID's would be suspended as long as it would be handled well by the students, but I don't know that the student population has handled it in the best way they could," said Colleen McKenna,

"Instead of leaving ID's when e had dances in Le Mans this year, there were sign-in sheets on which a student had to write in the name of her date in addition to her room and phone numbers. These sheets were not taken seriously, and students often wrote fake names or numbers," said McKenna.
There is growing concern not only about males staying overnight in the residence halls, but also for the overall security of the halls and the safety of their students, according to Sherri Crahen, Director of Residence Life and Housing at Saint Mary's.
"The new recommendation is for a form of identification to be left at the front desks of each residence hall, with the exception of Augusta Hall, from Fridays through Sundays.
We are coming to RHA first because we wanted studen eedback before we make statement to the Senior Officers who will make the final decision on this matter," said Crahen.
In a survey conducted last spring, $90 \%$ of Saint Mary's students did not want a 24 -hour visitation policy, according to Crahen. A new survey will be distributed Thursday, April 21 as students vote in the Hall Council elections in order to both raise student awareness of the issue sud to find dents are concerned about the deits are concerned about the saimplementation of this policy, said Jen Cherubini, RHA presi-dent-elect.

They have also examined the University's mission statement and the way that Catholic experience is described in other documents.
"The committee is trying to paint a picture of what student experience is," said Miller.

Prior to distributing the surveys, student input was first gathered in forums held in the majority of the dorms.

Although attendance at most of the forums was low-there were usually about 15 to 20 students at each one-Miller said that they "brought up a lot of issues and raised some questions on a personal level prior to the impersonal level of the surveys.

Preliminary results of the survey findings should be availible this weekend, said Miller, and they are expected to serve as a good indication of student position on the issue. Between 1300-1400 surveys have been returned so far, she said.
"The response shows that there is interest in the subject," said Miller. The committee has worked closely with Notre Dame's Office of Institutional Research in order to ensure hat the survey was complete and responses to it accurate.

Miller said that she hopes the work of the committee will be continued in years to come.

Student surveys are still being accepted in dorm dropoffs and the student government office on the second floor of LaFortune.

Fielding questions from a studio audience, Clinton said that young people are the chief perpetrators of violent crime and its chief victims.
"There's a lot of evidence that you can teach young people who grow up in tough environments that there are other ways to solve their problems other than shooting or cutting up each other or beating each other," Clinton said.
He said an important part of the crime bill pending before Congress is money for anticrime education programs in schools.
"We have to have a change in behavior and attitude and feeling among young people,' the president said.

Striking Teamsters

WASHINGTON
Negotiators broke into small groups to settle key issues in a nationwide trucking strike, but Teamsters union President Ron Carey had his hands full with a protest staged by his own mem bers.
Negotiators for the Teamsters and Trucking Management rucking compresents 22 trucking companies, arranged a third day of meetings today under the watchful eye of federal mediators. They said there remained "wide gaps dividing the parties" after Tuesday's sessions.

The Clinton administration has quietly been pressing for an agreement between the Teamsters and TMI, and the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Ser.
Negotiators divided into subcommittees to discuss the toughest issues, including the greater use of trains by shippers and the hiring of part-time workers. Those issues created the impasse that led to a breakdown in earlier talks on March 31 and the strike by 70,000 union drivers and dock workers that began April 6.

"Beginning this spring, the University will not allow moving trucks and vans on campus unless they are from professional moving companies and Student Activities has a copy of their contract with the particuar Geographic Club on file, the letter stated.

According to Assistant Direc tor of Alumni Clubs Frances Shavers, the decision was made in order to avoid the risks of danger to the students and of liability exposure to the University.

We realize that students are limited in funds, but we're stil worried about them driving the vans," said Shavers. "We don' want to risk having inexperi enced drivers driving these vans and possibly running into bad weather and getting in accidents."
"The University is willing to help students negotiate with the different companies," said Shavers. "We're just asking hem to contract with licensed drivers."
For many students, the new policy will nevertheless cause an inconveinance.
"It's just a huge hassle," said Off-Campus Co-President Matt Reh. "A lot of people depend on those vans to get their things to and from school."
"It's a lot of work and very difficult to go through the whole process of hiring a private company," he said. "It's definitely an inconveinance."

JOSH OZEERSKY

A reminiscence in sarcasm

The method behind the meanness

My rhythms of composition were put off by the tragic death of Kurt Cobain last week, which explains the two-lag in this column's appearance; but now having sufficiently rallied from that awful event, I am prepared to write an epilogue to my first year at Notre Dame.
Sympathetic readers will be pleased to know I passed my Master's exam, and freed of the paralytic hysteria associated with such trials, I can recollect in tranquility my first impressions of Notre Dame. I must admit I had apprehensions before I came here. But far from the citadel of white values I expected Notre Dame to be, I found it instead a glorious enclave of multiculturalism, its richness and diversity matched only by its fabulous shops and restaurants. Only the loss of my starting fullback's job to Lee Becton marred what might have been a perfect year.

Notre Dame! Wake up the echoes! How I look forward to being an obese alumni, wheezing support manfully at football games and parking my Lincoln games and parking my Lincoln what the admissions office calls "the Notre Dame family" knows no bounds in pursuit of this goal. Even as I write, my personalized license plate, "ND DOONESBURY

SKANK", is on order, bound for my sporty new red civic
And the rules! Who can ever get enough of them? When I first came here, I feared an anarchic chaos of students living unregimented lives, making as many copies as they wanted on the printers, and who knows what else. The swaddling bands of Mother Dome, needless to say, reassured me. The idea of forty-five year old grad students copulating out of wedlock kept me up at night, until I found we had a rule against it. Likewise with medium-rare hamburgers. But these are incidental virtues.
I suppose that by this point in my column, if you have made it this far you are saying to yourself "enough already!" If this facetious bastard doesn't like it facelious bastard doesn' like it here. Why doesn't he just go back to Now York where he belongs? Why does he have to inflict his oppressive sarcasm on us? This Ozersky. Who's he trying to kid?
I recognize such criticisms. The fact is, I'm getting comfortable at Notre Dame. First it struck me as merely a sea of white faces, but I've made my peace with the place. This is probably just a weakness of character, but there it is. I could live here for another two years or more! And by that time I would have a stack saved up of Letters to a Lonely God to bring Letce to Now York with bring back to New York with me and publish under my own name.
Perhaps I have been too hostile. The fact is, it's not that different from Rutgers. And it Gary Gary. But perhaps my brain is just fried from the long semester (I sat in the library, reader, while you were out spiking volleyballs in the Daytona sun) and maybe this accounts for my heightened nastiness. Or maybe not. I can't decide. But I will stop riding Notre Dame before they kick me out! I'm a company man! I know where my bread is buttered!

"Folks Back Home" offer talent and nostalgia mixture

BY MARY GOOD

Times have changed Students have changed. The social issues that charged the campus scene in the late sixties and early seventios have hanged Folk music however is back and even better
This Saturday night a
This Saturday night at 8 p.m. in the LaFortune Ballroom, the sound of an era that was marked by social activism (remember Vietnam), coffeehouses and pure acoustic sound at its peak is returning to Notre Dame and Saint Mary's in the form of "The Folks Back Home."
This weekend when sixteen alumni return to South Bend, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students will be get a taste of what their campuses were re ally like during the golden age of folk music. As the alumn musicians take the stage for reunion concert entitled "The Folks Back Home" their music will take on a still meaningful, yet modified message.
In the late sixties there was a In the late sixties there was a scene at Saint Mary's and scene at Saint Mary s and Notre Dame, according to Lou Mackenzie, professor of French Literature and also a participant in Saturday's concert. aackenzie remembers dorms fighting over who had the bes bands on their porches on football Saturday's when he was a student. During that time, the music and singing on campus helped define Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.
After this craze died down the music began to change so much that someone alone playing an acoustic guitar became a bit quaint, said MacKenzie. When the war was over and civil rights became a reality there was little protest music.
"Folk music was part of a zeitgeist, a spirit of the time," MacKenzie said
On Saturday when MacKenzie plays his still pow erful but now improved soun in the company of friends h expects the songs will show themselves to have held up well.
"Good music will survive," he said.
MacKenzie attributes the timelessness of folk music to the playfulness and almost surreal quality of the words.

Folk music is linguistically rich," he said. "Language is a powerful and satisfying tool with which to play."
When MacKenzie picks up his guitar, an upgrade from the one he used back in his hay day listeners can probably ay day, listeners can probably ex pect to enjoy the tunes of Bob Dylan that he feels have well withstood the test of time.
Although many of Saturday's featured artists have not seen each other since graduation, partly because they are not the typical alums who get together at class reunions, this weekend should prove to be the perfect time for a reunion of relationships as well as rhythm.

Time, space, past and pre sent will run together quickly when we see and hear each other again, MacKenzie speculated.
Since their musicianship has expanded, participants are all excited to enjoy each other's sound again
"This is a great opportunity for me to get together with friends I haven't seen in awhile," Chuck Perrin, folk singer and former campus personality, said. "I am excited about the chance to play back at Notre Dame again.

Although "The Folks Back Home" will be a dose of nostalgia, it will more importantly be a revival of acoustic music that is just as valid today as it was in the late sixties and early in the lat seventies.
"Music, words and acoustic sound meant a lot to people in he sixties and I think it will now," Perrin said.
"The Folks Back Home" will not be a group of hippies reliving their youth, it will be youth learning from the energy of those who were once and re main still to be committed to their music and memories.

Webster uttered last word: Dalloway's takes over the coffeehouse scene

BY EUYZABEIH REGAN

Clarissa Dalloway's was not the first student run coffeehouse on the Saint Mary's campus - although the acoustical music told a different story and "eappuccine's" were not the trendy drink twenty five vears renay dink, twenty he years ago same Mary's and Notre Dame stadents found a similar refuge in the basement of O'Laughlin Auditorium
At a time when political activism was taking precedence in most parts of the country, and Hollywood ligures were becoming involved with the primary presidential campaign between Robert Kennedy and Eugene McCarthy, Dustin Hoffman and Paul Newman commemorated Wobster's Last Word, the first coffeehouse at Saint Mary's, in 1968.
Saint Mary's alumnae Diane Rigaux and Kathy Grady, and Notre Dame alum Chuck Perrin were the students responsible for opening the ariginal caffeehouse at Saint Mary's "Chuck began a coffehouso in downtown South Bend, but not many students had transportation," Rigaux said. "The coffeehouse at Saint Mary's brought eople back on campus.
With the approval of the administration at Saint Mary's, the students took over the unused social center and startell operating with a coffeepot, a ed aperating with a colieepat, a stereo, and a stack of records. The student volunteers the doors open and a kep he doors open and a pot of day. "It was an unstructured place where people could drop by between classes for a cup of coffee and conversation, Rigaux said.
Webster's Last Word served free coffee during the week, but charged 50 cents for admission on the weekend when live bands played.
The money was first used to buy now stereo equipment, but then funded a scholarship for a Saint Mary's Fine Arts major with the profits, according to Rigaux.
"It gave us the opportunity to do something for somebody clse" she said "It alse took us away from ourselves."

The student bodies at Saint Mary's and Notre Dame were plit on political issues concerning the Vietnam War at the ime, according to Rigaux
"The coffeelouse was a place Cor people who weren't so much in the mainstream to 0," she said. "Activism was orn there, jusi from people being in contact with other people who had similar ideas n Folk music performed by students and some professors was most popular, according to ligaux. Rock bands, however vere known to perform occa sionally.
Each performer played a wenty minute set so that approximately five groups could perform each night. Webster's Last Word served as a bridge between Sain Mary's and Notre Dame according to Saint Mary's alumna Ann Halvorsen, the student manager in 1970-1971. There wore no real casua venues for people to get togeth or," Halvorsen said. "The coffeehouse was a more comfort ple place to meat peers then formal date or mixer.

"The best way to describe it is like being inside that Dire Straits video, 'Money for Nothing.' You're just climbing into a computer and having someone shoot at you," said Glenister.

Jesse Newman, a Cavanaugh Hall sophomore, recalled his experience and reflected on the future implications of the game "It's the wave of the future. Sega, Nintendo, all of that will Sega, Nintendo, all of that wili round of the Sweet Sixteen was concluded.

Having not won a major tourney since he started at guard in his junior year for the Indiana state champion Muncie Central High, he knew that this would be his final opportunity to put together another championship team.
"It was different because I was leaving the guys I loved playing with," Winningham said. "But I was still excited by the opportunity to go out and put together a new team, and after four years of Bookstore I knew what I needed to get."
He began his search by picking up his only remaining teammate from Bitter, Doug Scholer, who stands as a powerful rebounder and an intimidating force in the middle
His next pick-up came from a winter Parks & Recreation league in Mishawaka. Brad Fish, who played on Winningham's team, is a transfer from Bethel College who started for Bethel's squad and brings a very versatile attack to his new team.
Joe Haigh, a junior who last year carried Afrodeesiaks to the Sweet Sixteen before breaking his elbow, offers size, speed, and a deadly shooting touch to the mix
The final addition to the squad is one of the most lethal players participating in Bookstore Basketball. Eric Jones, who last year led Tequila White Lightning XI to the Bookstore title by scoring 10 points in the championship game, signed on with Winningham to complete perhaps the most talented and dangerous squad in the tournament.
Winningham named the team NBT, an acronym for Nothing But Trouble and an allusion to a reference to women from The Jungle Book.
"I don't see how they're going to lose unless they have an off day, because they can take it inside and outside," said Head Commissioner Emeritus Andy Sinn.
"I think if we play up to our capabilities," Jones said, "we'll end up right where we ought to be."
"We have a chance to win as long as we play as a team," said Winningham. "We're unselfish. All five guys can score, so you can't leave any of us open."
Being unselfish is what has characterized Winningham's style of play on and off the court.
"Most people on campus know him as Hoosier, and no matter where you go with him it seems like everyone knows who he is," said Scholer. "He's just a nice friendly guy who likes to make other people look good. He certainly loves doing that in basketball."
"I enjoy playing with him because he's a typical Indiana player-a team player," said Fish. "He doesn't just do things individually, he helps everyone improve."
"He pushes you to be better," Scholer added. "He's a completely fair player and I've never seen him throw a dirty shot. He's never lost his head in a game out of poor sports manship."
"He kind of embodies the spirit of Bookstore Basketball,' said Sinn. "I wish more players could keep a cool head like he does."
"He's probably one of the most unsung players ever to play here," said Bookstore Commissioner Paul Cifelli. "He's one of the least talked about players even though he makes (the round of) 16 every year. God knows what he can do with this team."
With his days at Notre Dame coming to an end and a new career looming, Bookstore Basketball is one of the few things keeping Winningham going.
"There are a lot of guys like me in the tournament-guys who don't have a lot of athletic ability but who love to get out there and compete," he said.
"I won't be happy unless I win," he added. "I just want to win the tournament."
That goal may not as tough to achieve as one may think, because playing playing against a team with "Hoosier" is always Nothing But Trouble.

with or without the knowledge of the entire team, is grounds for disqualification, the rescheduling of games to accommodate the football players involved in the tournament was also a point of contention.
"Had we not been playing football players, this wouldn't have amounted to a hill of beans," said Catalino's Dennis Barnes. "The fact that Bookstore shut down because of the football schedule shows how important they are in the minds of the campus.
"The rules state that all decisions by the commissioners are final," added Hall. "It seems the same discretion they exercised in rescheduling many of the games could have been used in our case."

To Coming From Behind, however, the extenuating circumstances behind the football scheduling separated it from the other incident.
"I think both teams knew the rules coming in, and they were the ones that broke them," said Travis Krahl of Coming From Behind. "The football players did not know about the changes, or else we would have tried to notify people earlier."

Lost in the controversy was an upset that will never find its way into Bookstore history.
"We would like to wish the best of luck to Coming From Behind," stated Catalino captain Mark Mallory. "There are no hard feelings."
"I have to give the commis sioners credit as well," Hall said. "They allowed us the opportunity to give our side. On a day when the top seeds finally were tested, other upsets were upheld. The highest seed to fall was No. 5 Bullseye Discount Liquor, which was upended by a tenacious Strategic Deterrence squad 2321 in a thrilling, see-saw game. The 10-3 Saint Mary's tennis team clallenges the Kalamazoo Hornets this afternoon at Kalamazoo,
The Hornets are No. 4 in the midwest and lave consistently beaten the Belles.

Saint Mary's No. I singles player Mary Cosgrove will be playing agalnst the No. 1 ranked single's player in the milwest, Jaclie Aurella. Cosgrove lost to Aurelia last year. However, coach Katie Cromer think Cosgrave is up to the challenge this year.

I don't have anything to lose," said Cosgrove. "This wil definitely be a personal best in my career if I beat Aurelia." It will be a very close match." said Thayma Darby. It will definitely make Mary play up to her fullest potential but I believe she can win." The Hornets are ranked higher than the Belles and defeating them would move Saint Mary's up on the charts It should be ane of the most intense matches the Belles have played yet.
"It will be a very close match, it all depends on what team plays the best on the given day," said Darby.

early lead with runs in the first inning. This time, the cushion was three runs as the Irish boosted their record to 22-8.
With one out in the first inning, Robby Birk singled and came home on Robbie Kent's 11th double of the year. George Restovich (2-for-4, 3 RBI) muscled a check-swing single into left field to bring Kent home and then came home on Paul Failla's RBI single for the 3-0 lead.
Purdue got its only run of the game in the second inning as Boilermaker third baseman Rick Galle took Price's first pitch of the inning deep for a home run to right field.
In the fourth, the Irish put five more runs on the scoreboard with a two-out rally. After Ryan Topham walked, Dennis Twombley singled and Greg Layson walked to load the bases. With two outs, Kent (2-for-4, 2 RBI) added another RBI to his team-leading total with a single to score Topham and keep the bases loaded.
Restovich furthered the rally with a two-run single that left runners on the corners for Mike Amrhein. The freshman outfielder (2-for-3, 2 RBI) drilled a two-run double into left field to give the Irish an 8-1 lead heading into the fifth inning.
The Irish defense continued to improve as several players turned in solid performances.

Topham helped Tom Price get out of a bases loaded jam in the fifth inning by snagging two fly balls in right field including a leaping catch against the wall and helped reliever A.J. Jones out of a ninth inning bases loaded situation with another running catch.

Birk prevented another potential Purdue run in the bottom of the eighth. With a runner on third, Birk, falling backward, pulled in the third out on the warning track in centerfield.
Jones closed the game by holding Purdue scoreless on two hits in two innings.

Chris Bloomer took the loss for the Boilermakers after giving up eight runs on 10 hits in just 3-2/3 innings of work.

Crosstown rival Bethel

 awaits Belles softballKARA MASUCCI Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's softball team defends their 20-6 record this afternoon in a doubleheader against crosstown rival Bethel College.
"We did well against them last year, but we haven't heard much about them this year They always play strong against us because we are rivals," stated Stacey Bogataj.
The Belles have had two games canceled this past week due to rain, so they have limited their preparation for today to practices and a loss to North Central on Saturday.
"We won the first game 3-0 but lost the second $10-1$. We shouldn't have lost it. We beat ourselves with mental errors said sophomore Maria Vogel.
"We let down our guard and et mental errors take over, stated coach Don Kromer.
In order to get ready for Bethel, Kromer has jacked up the Belles practice strength.
"Practice intensity was increased this last week. We hit live more, and worked on the individual aspects that are needed," said Melissa Novak According to the Belles, it is not only hitting and fielding that need to be improved in order to get the team back on the winning track, but mental preparation.
were very anxious to play North Central because all of our games last week got canceled, but we were shaky in the second game," stated Vogel.

We need to get our hitting to come around [today], but also our mental. We need to stay focused for both games," added Vogel.
"We just got sick of the rain last week and wanted to play, but we were mentally not into both games. I think this game will be different, though," said Bogataj
"Laura Richter [who was out this past week due to an ankle injury] just got released form the doctor, so we have our old line-up back. This will get everyone's mind back to the way it was [before her injury]," she added.

Women's tennis blanks Purdue

By KATE CRISHAM Sports Writer

The 16 th-ranked Notre Dame women's tennis team crossed its first hurdle to receiving a regional bid to the NCAA tournament by downing Purdue 8-0. The win improved Notre Dame's record to $16-6$, while Purdue dropped to 3-18.

Indiana will be a good match," he said. "It's not just a regional match, but a national match. Michigan is going to be a tough match as well."

NIU next

 challenge for Irish softballBy MEGAN McGRATH Sports Writer
When the Irish take the field today for a double-header at Northern Illinois, Miller hopes it is the same team that played the second game of Sunday's double-header against Ball State, a convincing 2-0 win.
She doesn't want to see the team who trudged through a win at Butler Saturday and then dropped the first game to Ball State 5-0 Sunday, commit ting three errors and earning just three hits in what Miller called a "lackluster" perfor mance.
"We always show up for games; I think we're always ready to play," Miller says. "Sometimes we don't come ready to win. I think that was clear this weekend. We struggled because we didn't come prepared to win.
Miller thinks the Irish will have to be very prepared for Northern Illinois.
Even though the Huskies have posted an 11-18 record thus far this season, like Notre Dame they participated in two spring break tournaments in the South and struggled against more prepared opponents.
NIU is perennially one of the toughest softball teams in the Midwest, and Miller is looking forward to the test.
"NIU is a good softball program. They are always at the top of their conference and among the top ten in the reamong Miller says "Since ghey will be joining the MCC they will be jothis gives us next season, this gives us a chance to see where we stand in the future of our con ference

Notre Dame's standing in the present of the MCC will be tested this Friday when secondplace Loyola comes to Ivy Field for a 3:30 p.m. double-header. The Irish are currently first in the conference with a 6-0 record in and a 27-14 overall. Junior catcher Sara Hayes leads the league with a . 391 batting average, nine home runs and 35 RBI and Terri Kobata's 197 strikeouts is tops in the MCC, while her 1.06 ERA is second.

INJURY REPORT: Senior pitcher Carrie Miller will be reevaluated tonight by team doctors to determine the likeli hood of her returning to the team. Miller suffered a stress fracture in her leg in early March, and was originally feared to be out for the season.
Sophomore utility infielder Andrea Kollar has been cleared to return May 1.

Trouble.  'Hoosier' provides nothing but for opposing teams

By BRYAN
CONNOLLY
Assistant Sports Editor
He's known by most as "Hoosier"

The nickname came rather innocently. While playing bas ketball behind Zahm Hall during his first day at Notre Dame, one of his eventual teammates accused him of looking like one of the stars of the movie "Hoosiers", and upon realizing that he was a resident of the great state Indiana his friends saw to it that Kris Winningham was to be known first and foremost as "Hoosier" for the remainder of his collegiate career.

Since that fateful first day, however Winningham has done much more on basketball courts across campus than acquire nicknames.

Whether it be through interhall pick-up, or in particular Bookstore Basketball, he has distinguished himself as one the most talented and team-oriented competitors on campus and as a player who carries himself with an unrivaled sense of sportsmanship.
Currently enrolled in Notre Dame's graduate business program Winningham surrounded himself during his undergraduate years with a team consisting of his best friends. Known as Bitter for the past three Bookstore tournaments, Winningham and his squad reached the Round of 16 each year yet consistently found itself walking away empty handed alter the first

Price pummels Purdue

By JENNY MARTEN
Senior Sporrs Writer
If Pat Murphy wants to beat Purdue, his best bet is to put Tom Price on the mound.
Tuesday's $8-1$ victory was the fourth time the senior lefthander has beaten Purdue in the last three years. His Irish career record against the Boilermakers now stands at 4-0 after allowing just one run on six hits while striking out four in seven inning on the mound.
"l've had a successful career against them," said

Price. "They came out with a plan because they've seen me so much. They were looking for my fastball away. That's why he hit the home run.
"I made the adjustment to go fastball in first and then move outside.
The Boilermakers shouldn't feel too bad because Price has been effective against everyone this year.
Tonight's win moved Price ahead of Chris Michalak on the Irish alltime win list with 35 victories. On the year, he is $8-2$, but his record is not his best statistic.

Price has pitched 73.3 innings this year and has only walked two batters. He throws strikes and challenges the hitters to respond. Either the hitter makes contact or he strikes out.
"He's effective against everyone, but especially aggressive hitting teams," explained coach Pat Murphy. "He's gotten the opportunity to pitch against Purdue a lot and done well against them."
As they have done in the last four games, the Irish hitters gave their pitcher an
