Notre Dame, Ind., July 25 -- Fifty-two University of Notre Dame sophomores sail from New York aboard the S. S. America August 8th to participate in the school's first foreign study program at Innsbruck, Austria.

Accompanying the students will be Rev. Thomas J. Engleton, C.S.C., assistant professor of history, who has been named director of the Sophomore Year of Studies abroad, and Louis L. Hasley, veteran professor of English, who will serve as assistant director. The Notre Dame group also includes Mrs. Hasley and John F. Turner, Jackson Hole, Wyo., a 1964 graduate of the University, who will be an assistant to the director.

Father Engleton and Prof. Hasley will teach courses in American history and literature respectively in English. Courses in theology, central European history and German will be conducted in German by faculty members at the University of Innsbruck. The Hotel-Pension Steinbock on the outskirts of the Austrian city will be the residence of the Notre Dame group.

The European-bound sophomores, selected from among 250 applicants originally, prepared for their stay abroad by taking a special German course during their freshman year. They will receive additional intensive training in the German language at Salzburg, Austria, August 17 - September 20th. The courses at Innsbruck get underway in mid-October.
