

Religious Bulletin.
November 10, 1923.

Victory in Ancient Rome.

In her early days Rome celebrated victory by offering sacrifice to the gods. In her later days victory was celebrated by dances at which everyone got drunk -- "ladies" included. Then the Huns came and "took away their place and nation."

Freshman Hall Special.

A great many Freshmen do not like to fast until the Mass at 7:30 or 8:30 Sunday morning. They should know that they can receive Holy Communion in the basement chapel from six o'clock till 7:25.

They're in Again.

"Courtship and Marriage" and "You and Yours" are again in stock. Visit the pamphlet rack.

Your Future Home.

The pamphlets on Heaven and Purgatory are not moving fast. Perhaps you prefer something on Hell. Read "The Dark Beyond." It's as good as a Mission. Start with page 43 -- "The Fire."

The Bulletins Admirers.

I

"Your Bulletin on Homecoming was decidedly unfair. The only ones drunk were some Freshmen and some old students." -- Senior Engineer.

Thanks for the information! And you let them get away with it!

II

"You are trying to make angels of us."

Angels are very good in their place, but their place is not at Notre Dame -- at least the Guardian Angels are not under the jurisdiction of the Prefect of Religion. A year ago a student said: "Daily Communion has transformed me from a spineless jelly-fish into a man." If there are any more students here whose backbones are soft to the touch, they are subjects for the religious Bulletin.

Home Training.

I

Just because your father holds the parish record for the breakaway during the last Gospel, don't feel that you have to break the Varsity record. If you beat the gun around here you are apt to start some new rules.

Freshmen should not mistake the corridors of the Main Building for the straightaway in Cartier Field. The Main Building is neutral territory and peripatetics have their rights.
