
Salute To The Vincentians.

They have really accomplished something. They have worked not for themselves, nor for a name, but for God and God's poor. They have pooled their effort, sacrificed time, by their love spread Christ, diffused grace, increased joy. They themselves have received no reward save the joy of doing for others and the joy of loving God in His poor. The Same God will be their reward. To Father John Kelly, their campus director, sincerest praise and the hope that next year even more students will faithfully follow with him the footsteps of Frederick Ozanam, St. Vincent de Paul and Our Blessed Lord.

During the next few days each of you can share in this Christian work. Give the Vincentians your old clothes to distribute. Let them, with their care and efficiency, store your furniture, lamps and rugs for the summer. Are you travelling home by bus or air? See the Vincentian ticket agent. He can fix you for even a tour abroad. To the very last cent, all commissions go to the worthy poor.

If you know the Vincentian spirit, then when it comes to helping these dearest, neediest servants of Christ, you cannot be stingy. Help them not only now, but during the summer, all through your lifetime. Loving them, you love Christ.

To Our Lady

We have colored your cloak with gold
And crowned you with every star.
And the silvery ship of the moon
We have moored where your white feet are.
As you look on this world of ours,
Campus, and lakes, and towers.

You are good to us, O great Queen,
Good as our mothers are.
And you know us by name, each one,--
Ah! Heavenly Registrar.
Enter our names in the book,
Into which your Son will look!

For we know that a time will come,
The graduating year,
When thousands and thousands of us

Who dreamed on your beauty here
Will gather before your face
And dream and talk of this place.

Then when your Son comes by,
You will tell Him, as of old,
"These are the boys we knew,
I, in my cloak of gold.
You at the breaking of Bread--
These are the troops you fed."

And a shout shall split the skies
As the ranks send up His Name,
A golden hour in heaven
When your sons, O Notre Dame,
Kneel to their Leader down,
There by the hem of your gown.
