What They Say About Prayer.

A Private in the Marines: "When I go into battle I'd rather be alongside a buddy who has more fear of God and less fear of man and bullets. The man who is too dumb to give a thought to God, is too dumb to be a good soldier, at least the American kind of soldier."

A Sergeant in the Army: "I want to thank Our Lady for watching over me. There are three reasons why. First, several days after we moved back from our last location, which was but a few miles from the front, a Jerry shell landed right on the spot where one of our office tents used to be. Second, about two weeks ago, that same bivouac area was bombed. And third, we heard from a reliable source that the Ordnance company which we were rationed and quartered with at that same location, had lost a large part of its unit up at the beachhead. Just why we didn't move with them when we pulled out, I don't know. So you see, Father, we Notre Dame men have little to worry about."

A Gold Star father: "My greatest happiness is to know that my son was a credit not only to his Country but also to his Creator. Every letter I received from him ended with the words, 'Love and Prayer.'"

In Lighter Vein.

A Private in the Army: "Will sure miss my French gal's ham and beans. Instead of kissing me good bye she shakes my hand and remarks she will remember me in her evening rosary. Didn't know they were still making that kind. Travel is broadening."

Why Marines are called "Leathernecks": "The term 'Leatherneck' now popularly applied to members of our Marine Corps, is derived from the high leather stock collar that was originally worn by them to remind them to keep their 'chins up' while on duty."--AVE MARIA.

Definition of a Chaplain: "A fellow who works to beat hell."

PRAYERS: (deceased) Daniel McCaffery; mother of Corporal Wilford (Dutch) Habing, '32. (Ill) mother of Harry Walters; father of Ed Ackerman, '34; Loretto Brennan (Main Office).
