Bob Hintz Goes South.

A few weeks ago, Bob was at death's door. He had received the Last Sacraments at Christmas time, and for a number of days a high fever kept sapping his strength. Blood transfusions became necessary. The fever finally brought on delirium.

A definite break for the better came last week. The fever began to drop and the delirium passed. Bob's eating became rather normal, bringing increased strength. By Saturday Bob was ready to travel. An ambulance took him to the Veterans Hospital in Indianapolis. He will remain there under treatment until he is strong enough to go farther South, perhaps to a government hospital in Arizona where the climate will be more favorable to his case.

Before leaving the hospital in South Bend, Bob expressed his gratitude to the student for supporting him by their prayers. He is grateful too to the veterans who gave him blood transfusions, to the students who visited him and to the donor of the radio. Bob still needs your prayers. This was his second attack of rheumatic fever.

'Won't You Pray For Me and My Brothers?

Millions of European children need your help. Thousands have been driven from their homes and are wandering without food, clothing or shelter. Their dead bodies are often found along the roadside. These children face hunger, stunted growth, tuberculosis, rickets and a host of epidemics. In parts of Germany, mothers bearing children from famished bodies cannot nourish them, and the infant mortality is at least fifty percent of births.

Pope Pius XII has sent an appeal to you and to every Catholic in the world to help these children by a day of prayer. FIRST FRIDAY has been set aside as Notre Dame's day of prayer for the CHILDREN OF EUROPE. Your Friday program should be! Mass and Communion, a half-hour of Adoration all day First Friday in the church, from 8:00 A.M. until 7:00 P.M.

A Tragic Death.

We are grateful to the priest who was so thoughtful in sending the following news account to us.

"Discharged from the Army only three weeks ago, after three years of overseas duty, which included action in the Battle of the Bulge, William P. Whalen . . . of Dorchester (Mass.) was crushed to death yesterday afternoon (Jan. 7) when the front wall of a garage collapsed on him as he walked by. Whalen was buried under several 200-pound cement blocks and other debris that fell 20 feet and covered his body. Children returning from school, who had observed the man walking near the garage, rushed to the scene and informed men there of the accident." (Bill left Notre Dame as a freshman in '41 to enlist in the Army.)
