A Tragic Death.

This story may sound like a fairy tale, but it's not. It happened recently in Hammond, Indiana. Three high school sophmores attended a birthday party of one of their friends. There was beer at the party, but no drunkenness, claims one of the boys.

After the party the three saw no reason for going home immediately; one said his mother was not home, another felt sick and did not want to hurry. Fatigued by their evening of fun, they decided to take a rest. Imagine where they streched out. On the railroad tracks.

All three fell asleep. One lad awakened and screamed when he saw a train approaching. His scream awakened one of his pals, the only one of the three who rolled off the tracks in time to save his life. The freight train passed on unaware that two boys had been killed.

Sure, you are going to say those sophmores should have had more common sense. But be careful. People in glass houses should not throw stones. Maybe you have been just as foolish. Maybe you have not slept on the tracks of a railroad line, but you could be walking into situations even more dangerous, like a particular "date", drinking on Saturday night with the boys or thumbing through sex magazines.

Walking into an old occasion of sin is dumb. This week end belongs to you to use for God's glory. Don't flirt with temptation, otherwise you will bring tragic death to your soul.

Professor Cooney's Anniversary.

Next Tuesday, October 15, a Mass will be offered in the Dillon Hall chapel at 7:20 A.M. for the repase of Professor John Cooney. This is the first anniversary of his death. Friends of Professor Cooney have requested the Mass, and invite the students and members of the faculty to participate in this Mass.

Men At Work At Prayer.

If you want to know why you receive favors you never prayed for, take a look at this list of students who are praying for you. A weekly half-hour before the Blessed Sacrament will bring you untold blessings. Are you included in this list?
