Brother Maurilius, C.S.C.
(A tribute by one of his "boys".)

We called him Brother Moe, for short; nearly all of us did, and there are two generations of Notre Dame students who lived under his long terms as rector of old Carroll and Brownson Halls. When these thousands hear of his death, they will speak of him with respect, as they always did.

The old "grad" of Carroll and Brownson cannot obliterate from his memory one picture of his days under Brother Moe. Noon and evening recreation was taken by the two halls in what is now the bandroom in Washington Hall. Brother was the Guardian Angel of all of us. During these "rec" periods he took up his favorite chair against the wall at the end of the room. There our Angel formed his own clouds with his big black cigar which was his companion of every recreation. As he smoked away enjoying every puff, one was always aware that Brother's purpose in being there was to be in the service of his "boys".

I am a priest now; some twenty years have passed since my Carroll Hall days. But still in my service until his final illness was Brother Moe. He was guestmaster in my place of residence. He was my server at Mass, this sixty-nine year old altar "boy". He continued to look after me and my priestly interests by his prayers for my special intentions during the days of suffering that preceded his death in the hospital. His was service to the end.

If you ever stopped at Corby Hall for any reason, the Brother you met was Brother Moe; old, gray, and very bent. And he was suffering. But you would never know it, as most of us never realized, since he kept his aches and pains to himself, and kept on the job from five in the morning until ten at night.

Say a little prayer for Brother Moe. He is most worthy of it, because he had a great part in the development of Notre Dame men by his guidance, prayer and sacrifice.
