Try to make your Xmas confession this week, and not at Sunday Mass.

He's Going Home

They tell me Eager's going home
From the shelter of the dome
To spend the Yule vacation;
His books are all in quarantine
That's why he's looking so serene,
He's dripping relaxation.

We hope that he won't be waylaid
By some designing city maid
Whose appetite's a caern;
And that his little guiding star
Won't lead him on from bar to bar,
From tavern to tavern.

He should be told it's not a crime
To give his folks a little time
Since he's been long away;
And he should know it isn't right
To gallivant around all night
And stay in bed all day.

He'll tumble from his lofty perch
If he should fail to go to church
On the appointed days;
His old-time neighbor will proclaim
That's what he learned at Notre Dame,
I don't believe it pays.

But if he gives the neighborhood
The good example that he should
By prudent moderation,
He still can have a gorgeous time
For things exalted and sublime
Don't spring from dissipation. T.F.B.

That Bouquet Card

The blue covered Spiritual Bouquet card delivered to your room last Monday is for your Father and mother. Without doubt you are praying for them in some way, as every good son should. But your folks deserve to know what you have done for them it gives them an extra thrill and satisfaction to get proof that you remember them in prayer.

If you have heard a number of Masses for your parents, mark down the number beside "Masses Heard" on the card, and do the same with the other devotions indicated. You can present your Bouquet with your other gifts on Christmas Day.

If you have done nothing for your folks to date, thaw out your heart, and get going.

PLAYERS: (deceased) father of Bill, '43 and George '43 Olvany; uncle of Jack Boss (BP) Seven Special Intentions. One Thanksgiving.
