

EASTER DUTY

Tomorrow, March 16

(In Your Own Hall Chapel)

We make our Easter Duty in common at Notre Dame. Why? Because the experience of the years has shown that the timid soul who finds it hard to go to the Sacraments feels less shy about it if he has strong support, and because setting a definite date is all the urging most of the phlegmatic boys need.

Cooperation is asked of the weekly and frequent and daily communicants. It is essential to success. All students, the 4700 and more, are asked to receive TOMORROW.

If you are going to confession—go tonight. Let nothing interfere. It is almost impossible to furnish enough confessors in the morning to take care of more than a very limited number of confessions. So you can't count on it.

Tomorrow concludes the Novena for a Happy Marriage. . . . Tomorrow is also the feast day of The Mother of Seven Sorrows. It is her solemn feast whereby she unites her sufferings with the sufferings of her beloved Son to give the world from the awful embarrassment of sin. . . . Mother of Sorrows, pray for us, stir up the grace of God in us all.
