

Tomorrow: Adoration for Dillon, Pangborn, and Sorin halls.

This is the last week for Lenten Adoration. Let all get into the act.

The Gripping Season

This is the indoor season; and gripping is great indoor sport. You ought to have one or two gripes -- or you're not alive. Maybe it's the discipline. Maybe it's Lent wearing you down. Maybe it's classes, or the faculty, or parents unsympathetic to your plans for Easter vacation, or the girl-friend's sending a "Dear John" note, or term papers, or the alleged humor of the roommate, or the saneness of life in general. Anyway, there's a therapeutic value in getting rid of gripes. Don't nurse it; get rid of it. Sit down, if you want to do so, and write a letter to the Bulletin.

This is the final lap of the indoor season. It could find you dissatisfied with life in general, or burdened with particulars that continue to magnify in your troubled chest. Drop a full description to the Bulletin. You'll feel relieved, and easier to live with. Then, before you know it, Easter will be upon us -- with its vacation, a clearing of Indiana weather, and of your own outlook and disposition.

The Deserted Wedding Feast

When you read or hear the Parable of the Wedding Feast, you wonder why the Master of the House had such a hard time finding guests. What would happen if an invitation of that sort were broadcast at Notre Dame?

Last week, the Bulletin voiced a gripe about the majority of the Seniors turning a deaf ear to just such an invitation. The Mass, daily Mass, is the Wedding Feast -- a delightful feast full of blessings for time and eternity. It takes place daily in your own home here on campus. This Wedding Feast cost you but 25 minutes.

The daily Wedding Feast is optional. But you will do well to recall that 25 minutes at Mass tomorrow will do you more good than 25 years in Purgatory later on!

How To Spend A Buck

Now and then you have a dollar to spend, and you're not quite sure just what to do with it. You're too full to eat; hence, ponder the following suggestions:

1. Pay your just debts.
2. Call the girl-friend ten times -- or call ten different girls.
3. Go to two double-features -- that will take care of the entire evening.
4. Buy four bottles of beer. Then come home and wake up the entire hall.
5. Send a telegram home for more money.
6. Give it to the missionaries in Bengal.

Tonight, a fine campus activity sponsored by the Knights of Columbus -- The Bengal Mission Bouts -- gets under way in the fieldhouse. It is worthy of your interest and your charity. Even more: it's good entertainment. The bouts come at a most appropriate time -- in Lent, when almsgiving is in order as a form of penance.

New Missals Available

The Class Chaplains in Cavanaugh, Howard, and Dillon now have a supply of St. Andrew daily Missals containing the new Holy Week liturgy. You may obtain them at bargain prices: the single volume at $4.50; the 4-volume set at $11.

PRAYERS - Deceased: Sister Marie Gracia, O.P. (sister of Fr. Walter Conway, CSC); grandfather of Joe Scotkovsky of Stanford.
